Wayne County has been a true leader in PACE from the beginning. At one point, it was the largest county east of the Mississippi with a PACE program. Now, a few years on, under the leadership of Warren Evans, the County is a trailblazer in PACE implementation. Wayne has the most PACE projects of any Michigan county (4), the most PACE financing in place (over $8.6M), and now the first PACE project with an African American-owned business. Wayne County’s PACE program has included Detroit and suburbs, for-profits and non-profits, hotels, and a variety of building types.
PACE Financing

Commercial building owners spend $200 billion per year on utilities, yet 30% of this is waste. The energy projects that could make these properties efficient often require significant up-front capital and take years to achieve profitability. Commercial loans typically have a tenor of 3-5 years, making the annual repayment greater than the energy savings. PACE changes all this by allowing property owners to finance energy efficiency and renewable energy projects via a property tax special assessment.

Wayne County’s elected leaders created a countywide PACE district in December 2013 by joining the statewide Lean & Green Michigan PACE program. Since the County will enforce the PACE assessment just like any other property tax obligation, lenders feel secure in providing fixed-interest loans with terms of up to 25 years. The result is 100% financing to facilitate energy-saving projects. In addition, these projects create good jobs, and communities upgrade their building stock, increasing the local tax base over time.
